If we examine the total number of children getting a Jewish education in Milwaukee over the past 23 years, we discover an interesting trend:

The percentage of the Jewish children getting a Jewish education through a preschool has increased from 17% to 25%,
The percentage of the Jewish children getting a Jewish education through a day school has increased from 28% to 38%,
The percentage of the Jewish children getting a Jewish education through a supplementary school has decreased from 55% to 38%.

In other words, there are still many more children getting their Jewish education in a part time setting (supplementary school) than a full time setting (preschool and supplementary school).
However if we look at the trends, of the children whom parents are giving a Jewish education, a higher percentage are choosing a full time setting (preschool or day school) than a part time setting (supplementary school) than in years past.

In 1992, 45% of children getting a Jewish education in Milwaukee were in full time settings (preschool or day school) while 55% were getting their education in a part time setting (supplementary school).
